FOREWORD

The journey of creating these images began with a fascination for the play of colors and reflections that emerge within bubbles.

I held solo exhibitions at some of India's most prestigious photography galleries. The first, held at Dilip Piramal Art Gallery at NCPA, and the second at Jehangir Art Gallery, both recognized as the mecca of photography spaces, received critical acclaim, offering audiences a rare glimpse into the macro photography world.

All the photographs were captured with Canon 6D mounted with a Canon 100mm macro lens and simple strobe/s.

Technically, soap bubbles are incredibly thin films of water sandwiched between two layers of soap molecules, forming a sphere due to surface tension. The thickness of a soap bubble film can vary from just a few nanometers at its thinnest to around 3 microns, making it hundreds of times thinner than human hair, which typically measures approximately 100 microns.

The various designs, colors, and patterns are the result of variations in the soap bubble liquid; which is typically a mix of water, detergent, and glycerine.

Factors that affect the final results: the ratio between water, detergent, and glycerine along with the temperature of the concoction.
